HALL'S Vegetable Sicilian HAIR RENEWER

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfillment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

IT having been asserted that I am preparing

Commodore Vanderbilt's Widow.

An interesting rumor comes to me from New Orleans to the effect that General George Pierre (he has dropped the Pierre, though, I believe) Toussaint Beauregard is about to marry Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, the widow of the dead Commodore. Beauregard, as all the world knows, was one of the greatest engineer officers on either side in the late war. Carefully trained at West Point, where he graduated second in his class, in 1840, he rendered valuable services to the United States in the Mexican war, and invaluable services against it in the war of the Rebellion. He is considered, to-day, one of the foremost military engineers of his time by competent critics. Some of them contend that he is the equal of any engineer since Vauban. Certain it is that he is very highly spoken of, and that some of his work—that at Manassas battlefield, in Virginia, for example—is pointed out by the older engineer officers of the army as a model for the young lieutenants of the corps. He is, however, nothing more than a great engineer. He was not a good fighter, and, after the war, he failed signally in an attempt to revive a Southern railroad which was on its feet within six months after he left its Presidency, and is now striding forward into permanent prosperity. Perhaps, since we have no great engineering work for him to do General Beauregard is best employed as he is at present in assisting to manage a lottery enterprise at a salary of $10,000 a year. General Beauregard is a short, shapely, handsome old gentleman with gray hair and white mustache and a ruddy face. He has the appearance and accomplishments of a courtier of the days of Louis XIV., and, withal, hosts of friends. He has buried two wives, and has a married son and a married daughter in New Orleans. Mrs. Vanderbilt was the reigning belle of Mobile while yet very young, in the years immediately preceding the war. She was not pretty, but was exceedingly attractive—"handsome," "stylish," "lovely," as the old beaux say. She married William Elliott, a New Orleans lawyer, but they did not agree with one another, and finally separated by way of the courts. For several years Mrs. Elliott, who was still very attractive, supported herself and mother by teaching music. They had met the Vanderbilts before her first marriage, and it is said that the Commodore, who admired them, quietly contributed to their support through her mother after her separation from her husband. Be this as it may, they met again in the North, after the war, and when Mrs. Vanderbilt died Mr. Vanderbilt married Mrs. Elliott. Now she is a handsome widow of about forty, with a legacy of $800,000—$10,000 for each year of her life with the Commodore, as some one has observed—and nothing to prevent her from marrying anybody she pleases to marry. Mrs. Vanderbilt is, as is well known, like her late husband, a great admirer of the Rev. Dr. Deems of the Church of the Strangers, New York City. Vanderbilt University, at Nashville, Tenn., probably owes its existence to the appeals made by Dr. Deems and Mrs. Vanderbilt to the dead millionaire. General Beauregard, a creole in everything else, is presumably a member of the Roman Catholic Church. —Correspondent Philadelphia Record.

—Charles Lamb represented the ordinary church-goer. "You don't seem to be any better for what I said to you," complained his friend. "No," was the beautiful and charitable reply, "but the man who sat near me must be, because it all went in at one ear and out at the other."

Bill Nye's Advice to a Correspondent.

She may be giddy, but she's just about sized you up in shape, and no doubt if you keep on trying to love her without her knowledge or consent she will hit you with something and put a Swiss sunset over your eye. Do not yearn to win her affections all at once. Give her twenty or thirty years in which to see your merits. You will have more to entitle you to her respect by that time, no doubt. During that time you may rise to be President and win a deathless name.

The main thing you have to look out for now is to restrain yourself from marrying people who do not want to marry you. That style of freshness will, in thirty or forty years, wear away. If it does not, probably the vigorous big brother of some "young lady of fourteen" will consign you to the silent tomb. Do not try to promenade with a young lady unless she gives her consent. Do not marry one against her wishes. Give the girl a chance. She will appreciate it; and, even though she may not marry you, she will permit you to sit on the fence and watch her when she goes to marry some one else. Do not be despondent. Be courageous, and some day perhaps you will get there. At present the horizon is a little bit foggy.

As you say, she may be so giddy that she doesn't want steady company. There is a glimmer of hope in that. She may be waiting till she gets over the agony and annoyance of teething before she looks seriously into the matter of matrimony. If that should turn out to be the case we are not surprised. Give her a chance to grow up, and in the meantime go and learn the organ-grinder's profession, and fix yourself so that you can provide for a family. Sometimes a girl only seventeen years old is able to discern that a young intellectual giant like you is not going to make a dazzling success of life as a husband. Brace up and try to forget your sorrow, and you may be happy yet. —Laramie Boomerang.

Farm Management.

No fixed rules can be laid down for the management of farms. The soil of one township may be best fitted for growing some kind of grain, while the adjoining ones can be most profitably devoted to live stock. No two farms situated side by side are exactly alike. The distance from market, the demand for special products, and not the least, the individual taste of the farmer, have all much weight in determining the system of farm management that is best to adopt. Those who have given the most thought to this subject, are the slowest to advise any general system to be applied to every farm. It is like a garment that is intended to fit all persons, and suits none. Every year of progress made in agricultural knowledge teaches more forcibly than previous ones, the truth that the farmer must rely largely upon his own intelligence and judgment in working out the best system for his own farm. Even in so seemingly trifling a matter as the pruning of a grape-vine, the wisest vineyardist can only give general rules, and each grape-grower must adapt them to the peculiarities of each vine. —American Agriculturist.

—Cricket and foot-ball seem, says the New York Sun, to require British soil to nourish them to a high degree of perfection. Even a team of Americanized lions were totally unable to cope with a Canadian team on the Hoboken grounds recently. It is only when he can induce his cousin to play base ball with him that Brother Jonathan comes out strong.
